ark City is perched above Salt Lake City and is known for its' beautiful vistas, reservoirs and hidden hot springs. Numerous neighborhoods offer a wide variety of single-family homes, condos, and ski chalets. With the SLC international airport only 33 miles away, no wonder folks from around the world are choosing to relocate to Park City, coupled with a lifestyle of expedition right outside their front doors. There are countless reasons why Park City is a desirable place to live and build or buy a home or second home.

Once a silver mining town, Park City is now a premier winter sports destination and cultural hub. Home to two major ski resorts, Deer Valley and Park City, plus an athlete training facility at Utah Olympic Park, the city fills up from November to March with skiers, snowboarders and bobsledders.

The winter months feature many choices for residents and visitors alike. Adrenaline seekers have their pick of world-renowned skiing, snowboarding, or bobsled tours. Milder activities to partake in the winter include snowshoeing, sleigh rides, tubing, ice skating, and dog sled rides. Additionally, Park City hosts the internationally acclaimed Sundance Film Festival every January.

In the summer, Park City offers many outdoor adventures such as mountain biking, hiking, fly fishing, world-class golf, white water rafting, ziplining, and more. Year-round events and festivals showcase the arts, culture, and museums that celebrate Park City's historical past. The Kimball Art Center located just a few blocks off Main Street features regional and national artists and hosts the annual Kimball Arts Festival every August.

HOME BUILDING CHECKLIST

WHAT TO EXPECT WHEN YOU'RE BUILDING

uilding a custom home or undertaking a major renovation can be a fun and exciting experience if you know what to expect. But, like getting married or having a baby, building a home is a MAJOR life event. One that you should enter well-informed so you can avoid surprises. You've purchased your homesite and now it's time for the work to begin. But before the first shovel hits the dirt, read our New Build Checklist to find out what to expect every step of the way.

- If needed, meet with your banker to discuss and secure financing.
- Select an architect or home designer who will help bring your vision to life on paper.
- □ Interview and hire a custom designbuild team (builder, interior designer, landscaper) responsible for creating your one-of-a-kind dream home based on your lifestyle and budget.
- Acquire building permits. Often a task performed by your general contractor, the permitting process will vary based on which community you have chosen to build in.
- Prepare site and pour foundation. This can be a relatively simple or complex undertaking depending on the location of your lot and whether you need a septic system.

- □ Framing, including floors, walls and roofing. The crucial "bones" of your home should be solid and long-lasting, making it even more critical to select a custom build team that employs only the highest quality craftsman.
- □ Insulation, plumbing, electrical and HVAC. Here in the Park City area, where temperatures can vary dramatically depending on the time of year, quality insulation as well as a good heating and cooling system is critical not only for comfort, but for energy efficiency.
- □ Complete drywall and interior textures; begin exterior finishes and install exterior driveway and walkways. Your home's exterior should reflect your personal style and fit in with the natural surroundings. A great designer can help create your home's unique first impression that also complements the warmth and style of the interior.

- interior trim and windows. Consider radiant heat tile -- ideal for warming cold feet after a day of skiing. Extensive use of south-facing windows not only bring in an inviting abundance of natural light -- particularly in the winter -- but make a room feel larger than it actually is.
- □ Complete mechanical trims, install kitchen and bathroom fixtures. The heart of your home, you will likely spend more time in your kitchen than anywhere else in the home, particularly if you enjoy entertaining. Choose appliances that combine form and function, while adding elegance to your cooking space.
- □ Install mirrors, showers doors and final clean-up; complete landscaping. Take full advantage of the region's natural beauty with drought-tolerant plants and native landscaping while emphasizing inviting outdoor living spaces that might include water features, hot tubs or pools, a fire pit and or built-in grilling stations.
- □ Final inspection and walkthrough. Your custom build team will walk you through your new home to acquaint you with its features. This is also an opportunity to spot items that need to be corrected or adjusted, so be attentive and observant. A quality builder will guarantee your satisfaction.  $\mathbb{M}$ ever before has the concept of a home as a safe sanctuary felt so relevant than now. As we seek to distance ourselves and thrive in our own private havens, the open space, fresh air, and natural landscapes of Park City, Utah, appeal as a perfect antidote to city life. And clearly, the word is out as more people discover the magic of this alpine town.

Promontory is the ultimate luxury community for multi-generational families to enjoy the good life. Set on 6,400 acres and surrounded by breathtaking scenery, this mountain playground offers architecturally striking homes with dramatic views and a four-season, luxury lifestyle with exceptional amenities.

Promontory boasts a variety of compelling properties within its 30 different neighborhoods, whether you want a special view lot for a custom build or choose to select from a variety of beautifully built homes. For a semicustom option, Promontory HOMES builds luxurious mountain homes within eight unique neighborhoods with buyer-tested floor plans that work within the stunning landscape. Buyers get the benefits of design choices and finishes and making the house their own without a full-time commitment of custom build.

Promontory's design guidelines allow owners a full spectrum of options from traditional rustic homes to contemporary mountain estates. And while there is a lot of architectural variety in the neighborhoods there's definitely a trend toward a mountain modern style of architecture.

Discover Pinnacle at Promontory, an exclusive gated community within Promomtory's gates and a favorite for those seeking spectacular, grand estate lots and discreet privacy.

What makes Promontory stand out from other highend legacy communities? While dream homes are still being built, the impressive suite of amenities are intact. Promontory's refined taste and spare-no-expense philosophy is reflected in their 14 signature, membersonly amenities. The Beach House sits along a sandtrimmed lake with luxurious waterfront cabanas, and The Shed is the center for family fun with a bowling alley, arcade, basketball court, and 500-seat amphitheater. Experience the elegant Equestrian Center, top-rated Pete Dye and Jack Nicklaus signature golf courses with modern marvels for clubhouses, and the rustic Outfitter's Cabin. New additions include Double Deer, a massive ballroom and event space for special occasions, Spa Sage, and the 19th Golf Lounge, all of which are now part of the Nicklaus Clubhouse. Wedding guests and friends can also experience Promontory style luxury by renting a Double Deer Cottage when visiting.

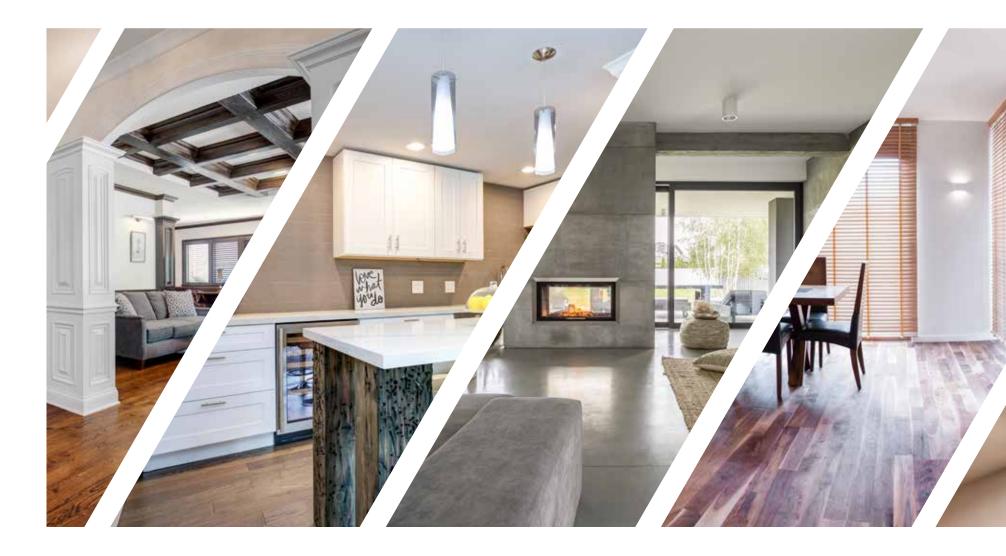

"Promontory is the ultimate private playground for every member of your family, every season of the year. With so many thoughtfully designed, unique amenities, five dining options, and two world-class ski resorts with on-mountain private Promontory ski lodges just outside our gates, Promontory is truly a one of a kind community that could never be replicated in the present day. It's no wonder that the secret of Promontory is out," shares Kelli Brown, General Manager of Promontory.

Trending Now Cut your Home's Carbon Footprint Without Cutting into Style

odern home-builders have taken on eco-friendly home design, driven by facts like: "39% of the energy used in the country are in the residential and commercial sectors". Moreover, our custom home builders are successfully taking on this challenge without sacrificing curb appeal.

The latest, eco-friendly building trend, and a word that you'll be hearing more often is Net-Zero energy design, or a building capable of utilizing Eco-friendly elements with less need for traditional powersources like natural gas, oil or electricity. The most significant variable in this equation for new homes are solar panels and window orientation.

Solar panels are especially effective in areas that receive a lot of sun, like Park City, Sun Valley or Scottsdale. Solar panels work by absorbing natural sunlight with photovoltaic cells, generating direct current (DC) energy and then converting it to usable alternating current (AC) energy with the help of inverter technology. Photovoltaic cells absorb the sun's energy and convert it to DC electricity. Though solar panels are an amazing progressive invention they aren't very visually appealing. Your designer and builder need to consider which direction roof angles should face so solar panels are least visible (increasing curb appeal) and receiving the most sunlight (increasing energy efficiency).

Now when it comes to windows, home builders study design plans, noting where the greatest and least windows are, and how to plot location and local weather impact on the home. Essentially, in hot climates, the sides of the house with the least windows face the sunniest directions; where in cold climates, the sides of the house with the most windows face the greatest sun exposure. Throughout this directional orientation process, it is also achievable to capture that highly-desired asset—natural light.

If you're looking to conduct a green-minded remodel of your existing home, you obviously can't just helicopter your house off its foundation and re-orient it. In a remodel, first replace your old, inefficient windows with high-efficiency ones. Timeworn windows are often culprits in wasteful thermal flow. Beyond windows, consider swapping out your old appliances with new, cost-effective, and ecologically resourceful ones—luxury appliances are both eye-catching and sleek.

As we continue to see how much Net-Zero home design benefits the world we live in and decreases are dependence on coal and fossil fuels, choosing to go green will become the choice of modern home builds without sacrificing beautiful design.

Updating a Log Home for the 21st Century Family or 25 years, Jaffa Group has been at the leading edge of design build in Utah. So when the quintessential 21st Century family sought to update their log home inside Park City's prestigious gated community, The Colony, they called upon Scott Jaffa and his skilled team of architects, designers, builders, and sub-contractors.

Though sleek mountain modern exteriors are becoming the norm throughout the region, this family was intent on preserving the original character of their home including keeping much of the log work in place. Jaffa Group achieved a contemporary aesthetic by painting some interior logs white, while giving others and all those on the exterior of the home a darker treatment.

The house was reconfigured and reimagined to suit the family's lifestyle that includes gathering in large numbers, preparing family meals together, and spending as much time outdoors as possible. To these ends, a window wall in the dining room opens onto a Zen-inducing water feature connecting the natural and built environments seamlessly. The large, open-concept kitchen and family room features a bespoke island, as well as ample counter and communal table seating. A custom marble and glass refrigerator and a built-in pizza oven support this family's endless hours cooking in the kitchen.

"Everyone hears the nightmares about doing a remodel; we did not experience any of it. Scott not only listened to the vision we had, he made exactly what we had in mind. The entire crew was organized, on time, courteous and attentive to our ideas. Everyone stayed right on schedule with a minimum of intrusion on the neighborhood."

- Bill & Jean Martin

"As non-residents, we were nervous about attempting a complete remodel of our home. Scott and the Jaffa team kept in constant contact with updates, photographs and other progress details. We were only able to visit the jobsite once during construction yet always felt fully involved. Jaffa Group completed the job on time and under budget. When does that ever happen?" - Adam & Kate Firestone

The greatest change came to the outside where an old pool house was transformed into an open-air pool pavilion. An outdoor chef's kitchen, multiple fire features, and full entertainment setup make this the ultimate hangout spot for four seasons.

When it came time to complete the interiors of the home, pieces were chosen that complement one another on the spectrum from rustic traditional to serene contemporary. The entire house radiates a calm energy while being able to standup to regular use by parents, grandparents, kids, aunts, uncles, cousins, friends and more. Seemingly endless seating options and multiple vignettes provide opportunity for impromptu gatherings all over the house.

Though each room in the home is decidedly unique and different, rich textures and fabrics, repeating natural elements throughout, and whimsical art tie together the entire design. This log home reimagined for the 21st century family is but one example of the extensive remodel work that Jaffa Group does so well.

BUILDING CUSTOM HOMES TO Complement Your Lifestyle

veryone dreams of a custom home built just for their family and how they live. "A custom home is an opportunity to express one's preferences, lifestyle and unique tastes," say Ryan and Jesica Taylor, co-owners of Upland Development. They make knowing their clients and expressing this the center of how they build custom homes.

"Construction is about people."

"Construction is about people. They want to enjoy what they have worked for, and it's my responsibility to ensure that their dreams and expectations are realized," says Ryan Taylor, the member of the team most often found at jobsites, versus Jesica who keeps a close eye on schedule, orders, coordination and budgets from the office.

"Building a home begins with a concept and ultimately ends in being a large investment, but it doesn't have to be risky," Jesica adds. "It is our responsibility to put all the pieces together in the initial planning stages so the client can make informed decisions for building a dream home that embraces a family's specific lifestyle needs now and into the future while adhering to a budget plan that works for them."

Photos by: Scot Zimmerman - Designed by: Bridgwater Consulting Group

As the Taylors explain, timeless homes consider the family over decades and to adapt to the family's changing lifestyle as it matures and changes. Ryan emphasizes that it also includes building materials and finishes that won't freeze the home in time, and the home needs to continue to highly perform mechanically and structurally. Homeowners agree on the benefits of Upland Development's attention to budget, schedule, and quality, but they always also comment on creativity and problem solving. One called Ryan her "sourcebook of creative ideas" and said that her favorite features in the home came about by sharing ideas that Ryan made a reality.

"Sourcebook of creative ideas."

In Utah, the climate allows for living outdoors all four seasons, and the views are one of the main reasons people build in the Wasatch Mountains. "Outdoor living is really basic to how people like to entertain and relax," adds Jesica. "If they are going to fully enjoy the home, outdoor living has to especially be specific for clients." Ryan usually gets very personally involved in building outdoor spaces.

Upland Development builds throughout Park City, the Wasatch Front and Back, and beyond. It's Ryan Taylor's hope that generations to come will enjoy living in Upland Development homes, and the homes will be recognized by their quality and durability.

here is an art to turning a great home into an extraordinary home. Big Canyon Homes is an awardwinning custom home builder that understands the importance of designing homes that match our families' lifestyles. We strive to capture our client's dream in every custom home design.

Big Canyon Homes has been building custom luxury homes in Utah and Wyoming since 1990. Our clients have come from across the nation looking for the perfect location and the home of their dreams.

Big Canyon Homes is also proud to be an industry leader in energyefficient luxury homes, including Net Zero Building. A Net Zero Home is more than just a home with solar panels; it is designed to integrate energy conservation—from framing to finishing.

We understand that building a luxury home can be a stressful process. That is why we work hard to make building your home a fun and exciting experience from the moment we break ground until the day we turn over the keys to your front door. Your satisfaction is Goal #1. We work with our clients, architects, and designers to complete the project on time and within budget. We expect quality work, adherence to scheduling, and fair pricing from our subcontractors and vendors. We reward them by paying them on time and providing safe, clean job sites. So, our loyalty + their integrity = #1 Goal.

"We have built several houses over the years, and we have never had the kind of experience we had with Craig and the Germania team. He is on top of every single detail and totally transparent at every stage in the process. He actually made the whole process enjoyable, and that is unlike any experience we have ever had. And this job was remote! Craig is the best in the business." -Ken W., Homeowner

Otto/Walker Architects was founded on the dual principles of designing structures which fulfill the aesthetic as well as practical desires of its clients while utilizing all the attributes a building site has to offer. These natural gifts often include expansive views, generous solar exposure, mature vegetation and topography which can help to enhance a design. To be successful in a mountain environment such as Park City, Utah, these two key goals must be achieved while also providing a beautiful project which endures the test of time.

Otto/Walker Architects emphasizes client involvement throughout the project, while providing the vision, creativity and thorough beginning-to-end service that our years of experience can provide.

he advantages of hiring a design build firm – as opposed to a separate architect, construction company, and interior designer – are many. Perhaps the greatest is that the home ultimately achieved most closely matches the client's boldest visions. It also allows the architects, builders, and designers to fully show off their skills when all three disciplines work in concert. Theoretical concepts are immediately rooted in foundational reality. Any troubleshooting is performed in real-time as the project progresses.

This custom home by Park City firm, Jaffa Group, is a shining example of integrated design build. Situated in one of the iconic ski town's most densely populated residential neighborhoods, it achieves a sense of privacy typically reserved for lots many times its size and far removed from civilization. To accomplish a feeling of being tucked in a forest, Jaffa Group sited the home as far up on the building envelope as possible. Existing foliage and dedicated open space frame the home. Though "wow" entries are typically a hallmark of Jaffa Group plans, the team reversed the entry by carving it into the ground level and was thereby able to bring the living areas up to tree level on the second and third floors. The resulting mountain and forest views speak for themselves.

"We gave Scott an extensive list of all the elements that we wanted. He and his team listened. Scott's meticulous placement of our home combined with his careful positioning of expansive windows allowed for stunning mountain views from practically every room."

TRENDING NOW Designing your Outdoor Space for Year-Round Use

lanning the outdoor environment around your new build or current home is as essential as the selections and design you choose for the indoors. With today's outdoor heaters, fireplaces, and stylish concrete fire tables, entertaining, dining, and relaxing outside with a favorite beverage is possible year-round, even in Northern climates.

Before your contractor lays the first pavers or digs holes for your elegant deck or patio, there are three things to consider.

Orientation of your outdoor living space relative to sun & weather exposure; consider an East-West orientation. Typically an outdoor space is built off the kitchen for convenience.

Consider creating a focal point, such as a fire pit, covered dining and living area, or lush garden backdrop. Brainstorming with your designer on the style and ambiance you want to create.

There are many considerations for making this space both festive and functional with some pre-planning tips. Consider plumbing water to an outdoor sink or water feature. You may also want to install an outdoor bar complete with a sink and refrigerator for beverage and wine storage.

Pre-install gas lines for your gourmet grill, outdoor heaters, fire-pits, or maybe you enjoy the sound and smell of a crackling fire. A built-in fireplace not only adds to the ambiance but can provide natural warmth. Lighting is very important, and allows for maximum enjoyment and entertaining in your "dreamy outdoorspace." String lights and up-lighting can create an inviting atmosphere. Up-lights showcase water features and foliage while spotlights and outdoor sconces frame the area. Music lovers can pre-wire outdoor speakers to enhance conversation and mood for any occasion.

Smart outdoor lighting adds security and safety for the homeowner with automation, remote controls, sensor lights for front doors and garages, and solar lights alongside pathways and driveways. In colder climates, consider a heated driveway to save time from shoveling and reduce ice build-up.

Like inside your home you can never have enough outdoor outlets for holiday lights, additional lighting, and power tools. Also, for convenience, consider installing hose spigots on all four faces of your home.

Lastly and most essentially, when protecting your outdoor masterpiece from the elements a covered porch or extended roof-line, or a well-made pergola can provide ample shade. As you brainstorm with your designers and contractors, incorporate technology, and paint your canvas, you might find yourself spending a lot more time outside.  $\mathbb{M}$ esignScapes has been a trusted hardscape contractor for over 12 years! We are first choice for homeowners in Park City for building retaining walls, patios, outdoor kitchens, fireplaces, and driveways. Our team has completed hundreds of hardscape projects in the Park City area with 100% satisfaction. Today's luxury homeowners and builders are bringing the indoors outside with outdoor living and kitchens, allowing them to entertain any time of year.

Park City receives up to 400 inches of snow per year—or 35 feet. Perfect for powder-hounds skiing The Canyons or Deer Valley, but not welcome in your driveway or outdoor patio.

Many residents don't enjoy shoveling massive amounts of snow all winter or paying exorbitant fees for snow-removal, not to mention potentially hazardous slips on an icy surface. DesignScapes offers a fantastic solution for these three issues—custom heated driveways.

We install a state-of-the-art heating system under your driveway. If your home is a second home, you can alert the system before you arrive to eliminate the snow-pack so when you arrive at your vacation home, the driveway and patios are clear of ice and snow.

Duce Ltd. officially began in 2015, generating beautiful exterior finishes; exquisite roofing, stonework, gutters and steelwork for commercial and residential projects in the greater Salt Lake and Park City area. In the last year, Duce Ltd. has diversified its scope of work and expanded into interior finishings in the kitchen and living areas in addition to intricate fascias and outdoor patios for luxury homes.

This featured home was a creative collaboration between Duce Ltd. and a local Park City couple. The homeowners were delighted with the outcome of their living room and the indoor-outdoor craftsmanship and material selections giving this home a cohesive feeling and curb appeal.

Dennis Duce listens very carefully to each homeowner's ideas and concepts for their space. There will always be unforeseen challenges and setbacks during the process. Still, Dennis and his team have staying power and ingenuity to problem-solve on-site and see each project through until the homeowner is completely satisfied.

"Working with Dennis Duce was a pleasure from the start. He asked great questions and really listened to Sharron and I. Dennis' creativity and scope of vision for our home was amazing. We couldn't be more thrilled with the outcome of this project—we call home!"

rom minimalism to non-traditional, driveway-design is almost endless. When choosing a particular style, be sure to select materials that complement the exterior home design and landscaping. It may seem challenging to harmonize design, practicality, and personal tastes. We suggest starting with what is practical, then moving to the look and overall feel you want to achieve, and the materials that will best harmonize your property.

Local climate is usually a good place to start when considering driveway materials. Let's begin with the all-time favorite: Concrete. Concrete is functional across a myriad of climates. Additionally, concrete can suit the design dreams of both modest and eccentric tastes. For minimalists, concrete can be dyed neutral colors, like tan, for a look featuring zero strikes against conventionality, but still a departure from undyed, classically gray concrete. Impartially colored concrete is also an excellent idea for driveways surrounded by brightly colored flora – this offers a pleasing contrast. For a less traditional look, concrete can be paved into irregular shapes, or have other materials like bricks or pavers incorporated in linear patterns, or random or fanciful design. You might want to consider adding a grass strip down the middle of the concrete if you live in an area with consistent precipitation. Grass can improve your driveway's drainage due to the permeability of grass.

Despite its adaptability, concrete has a serious competitor in asphalt, especially when it comes to harsh winter climates. Contrary to concrete, asphalt is not as prone to expansion and contraction, which can cause damage and deterioration. Asphalt also absorbs warmth from the sun more efficiently, and that heat helps to melt ice off driveways improving overall safety. Furthermore, asphalt makes an excellent driveway material choice for another big reason—asphalt is eco-friendly. Because asphalt can be crushed up and recycled, it is the perfect option for those who desire an environmentally conscious driveway design.

From concrete to pavers to bricks and asphalt, you can take all the advice the world has to give. In the end, however, you pave your way in deciding what material(s) will make your driveway envy of the neighborhood while simultaneously reflecting on what defines your contentment with the end product. It's a balancing act, to be sure, but one that'll result in the coolest, most practical driveway on the block. IM

Ins & Outs of the Perfect 21st Century Bathroom

e all remember the curio cabinets and clutter of our grandparents' generation of bathroom décor. However, chaos is impermissible in today's toilettes, where designs concentrate mainly on being as "Insta-worthy" as a bathroom can get. Lavatories nowadays convey the style, personality, and even pleasures of the homeowner, and the ins and outs of it all are guite simple to achieve.

It begins with space. Contemporary bathroom design not only prioritizes storage space, it maximizes it. One way to capitalize on your bathroom space is by installing floating vanities with pull-out shelving hidden within the vanity, increasing the open space in your bathroom while also adding storage functionality.

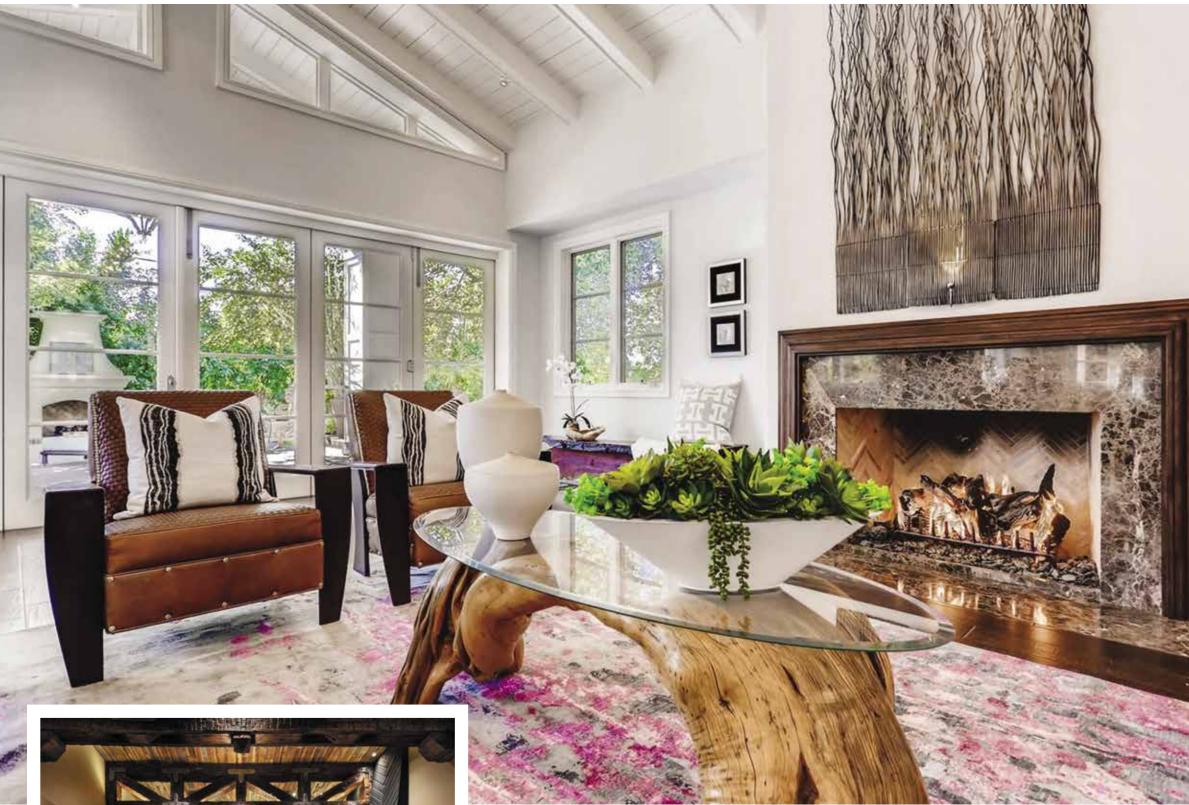

Today, bigger is better in bathrooms – an ideal central to the Open-Concept idea, which became popular in the '90s and remains so today. White is the go-to color to achieve openness. Such a monochromatic scheme makes even the smallest of bathrooms appear larger. The ingredients in cooking up this ultra-open feel don't consist solely of color choice, however. Windows providing natural light also help to open things up. Incorporating views of the outside world from your bathroom are quite trendy. In the city, views of a cityscape from the lavatory are very much en vogue. In contrast, in more rural areas, a window open to surrounding nature is what a modern interior designer might call "rustic chic."

Moreover, we must never forget the fixtures. Marble and brass fixtures have come into vogue if you want a modern vibe. Another material choice dubbed trendy is reclaimed and recycled materials wildly popular in mountain homes. Materials like reclaimed wood provide, as mentioned earlier, "rustic chic" which, in homes surrounded by forest, creates a curious kind of blending of the outside world with the inside space.

The overall goal of 21st-century bathroom design is to not tip our hats to flamboyant design choices á la 1950s-80s, but instead strive for stylish simplicity. We can sum up this style trend most accurately by saying - "Be understated but memorable" If that is not the perfect way to describe a perfect bathroom, then we suppose it's time to remind ourselves of the definition of perfection. M

Home Technology

Trending Now Technologies for Today's Luxury Homes

magine a room in your home where you can see the latest Hollywood Blockbuster in surroundsound, go bowling with your family, or play nine holes of golf at your favorite course. A space where you can enjoy a multitude of activities, like baseball or soccer—even yoga. This space would have to be enormous to accommodate all this multigenerational fun, but with the ongoing trend of luxury home-technology systems, the skies the limit for you and your family.

Home Technology has evolved alongside our imaginations, lifestyles, and trends. Moreover, this room should be professionally designed and installed—think ultimate man-cave or next-level den for endless fun and enjoyment for you and your guests.

These virtual playgrounds offer a stimulating and tangible experience for homeowners alongside the world-class cinema experience in a stylish home theater. The home tech industry also helps to support a population that may be home-bound.

Today's families are more mobile, with remote work and school options. Families have the opportunity to enjoy their second homes in resort areas for extended stays. WFH (Work From Home) trend is now expanding into a PAH (Play at Home) trend. With all these after-hours experiential choices, you'll rarely feel the need to leave the comfort of your home.

Lifestyle and practicality are at the heart of this growing home-centric trend. Media rooms, automated security systems, and voice-activated home automation enhance our lives in profound ways as well as keep us safe and secure.

Todd Astill with Nerve, a Home Technology company based in Park City, explains, "Every technology in your home should enhance your lifestyle, making your home more entertaining, convenient, comfortable, and secure."

There are also many eco-friendly options available for home homeowners—automated shades for passive solar homes respond to the rising and setting sun, to high-capacity battery banks linked to DC-lighting radiant floor heating systems. Energy efficiency choices for every part of daily living automated lighting and smart temperature controls, can make every aspect of living seamless, leverage full automation, and bring everything together into one simple, easy to use interface.

According to the American Council for an Energy-Efficient Economic, smart homes' energy usage can be as much as 17 percent lower thanks to smart devices' ability to monitor usage and make adjustments.

More comfort and convenience, combined with energy savings, make luxury home technologies the smart choice.

Elume DISTINCTIVE LIGHTING

3156 QUARRY ROAD, UNIT A PARK CITY, UT 84098 435.647.2997 ELUMEPC.COM

e are Elume, a boutique showroom in Park City that has won the prestigious ARTS Award three times for Best Lighting Showroom in the western United States! Filled with fascination and inspiration, our showroom is the backdrop for the magic that happens here with the Elume lighting designers – an extraordinary team with extensive experience, a flair for design, and a passion for lighting. We believe the lighting should reflect the occupants of the home and be chosen specifically for each project – often custom-designed.

We are proud and extremely fortunate to partner with Hammerton, a premier custom lighting fabricator in Salt Lake City, on many of our projects. Since 1995, Hammerton has set the industry standard for boldly designed American-made lighting that is exquisitely handcrafted, perfectly proportioned, and meticulously detailed. There is no limit to what we can design with them since they are experts in artisan glass, woven steel mesh, eco-resins, acrylics, crystal, aluminum, bronze, rawhide, mica, textiles, and more.

Elume is conveniently located in Quarry Village at the Jeremy Ranch/ Pinebrook exit. Regular hours are Monday – Friday, 10 – 5. We are always open during those times for browsing but make an appointment so we may give you the attention you deserve if one of our lighting designers is not available.
